N'dilo and Detah numbers are included in Yellowknife, as separate postal codes do not exist for each community.

Numbers included physician diagnosed injuries and poisonings regardless of location (clinic, hospital or other location).

Nurse practitioner diagnosed injuries and poisonings are included.

Some individuals may be diagnosed more than once for the same injury or poisoning.

Data unavailable for the Northwest Territories total or the Remaining NWT Communities in 1999/00.

N'dilo and Detah numbers are included in Yellowknife, as residency for children in these communities is often recorded as Yellowknife by the child welfare worker.

Numbers may have increased since the late 1990s due to the impact of the new Children and Family Services Act (in force October 1998). The new Act created a plan of care agreement as a new way to provide services to children.

Under the plan of care agreement, children could still be living in their parents' home but are receiving services from the Department of Health and Social Services. An equivalent category to 'a plan of care agreement' did not exist under the previous Act.

Since the new Act came into force, parents have been more inclined to seek services for their children, or family, now that they do not have to automatically give up parental rights.

The vast majority of the increase in children receiving services has been from children who are living at home. And, of these children receiving services in their homes, most service arrangements originated through voluntary agreements as opposed to court orders.

These numbers are subject to future revisions (due to record revisions, data entry delays and database design changes) and are not necessarily comparable to numbers in other tabulations and reports.

Data for Tuktoyaktuk were unavailable for 2002/03 to 2006/07, and has been estimated based on an average of the previous three years.

Fort Smith shelter data were not included for 2004/05 as it was not in operation for most of that year.

NWT data are based on shelter and not community of residence. Some admissions may be from non-NWT residents.

NWT residents seen in non-NWT shelters are not included in the above statistics.
