NWT 2009-2010 Fur Market Forecast

- Marten: NWT trappers should expect $65 - $95 for prime dark XXL – XL skins
- Lynx: Expect $85 - $150. Last year lynx prices took a big adjustment with demand and clearances strong on pelts with clear white bellies with distinct black spots. Fur Harvesters Auction has received the highest prices consistently the past few years, with our northern cats bringing a premium. Again, it is the Russian market commanding, and expect stronger prices once Russia recovers.
- Fisher: Average price of $50. The past two seasons have witnessed prices falling away on this luxury item. We are expecting to see an improvement on this item as the season progresses.
- Beaver: $15 - $20. Beaver was the most disappointing of all species last season. Last year's sales went mainly to China and if China can solve the dressing and plucking issue this article will improve, however, castor prices are very good.
- Wild Mink: $18 - $20 range. Mink remains a big disappointment as competition is limited with a few Italian accounts showing interest. Price levels are expected to remain at last season levels.
- Muskrat: Expect $3 - $5. Fuelled by strong demand coming from China, we expect muskrat to be one of the better items this year. Chinese buyers will see competition from Canadian and eastern Europeans, which should make for a healthy market.
- Red Fox: Average $40. We expect demand will be greatest for better quality darker coloured foxes from heavy and semi-heavy eastern sections.
- Cross Fox: $35 - $40. This item has been a strong performer the last few years and we expect good demand again this year for this unique pelt.
- Arctic Fox: $20 - $25. Strong demand for white fox, expect price levels to improve over last year.
- Arctic Wolf: XXL-XL with good colour (black or white) complete, well-handled skins are in strong demand and we anticipate prices in the $250 - $400 range. Smaller sizes, tawny colours and damaged skins are difficult to sell.
- Wolverine: XXL-XL sizes complete well-handled skins with distinct clear patterns will fetch $300 - $450. Incomplete skins are much lower in price. Take extra care to ensure lower lip is left on your skins.
- Black Bears: Fair demand for good quality, well-handled skins. Poor quality will see limited interest.
- Polar Bears: Excellent demand for complete well-handled white pelts for taxidermy. Clear bears 8ft and greater will sell for $3,000 and more.
- Grizzly Bear: Demand remains strong for good quality complete skins for taxidermy, average price in the $2,400 range
- Weasel: Strong demand in the $5 - $7 range.
- Squirrel: Good demand for complete skin, including the tail, will fetch $1 - $3.
